CASTLETON SUMMER SCHOOL.

Instructors for the 1918 Session Are An-

The summer school for the elementary school teachers of Vermont, to be held at Castleton, opens July 1 for four weeks. Last year 247 teachers were reg-istered from 90 different towns, and the Castleton summer school was probably the largest in New England devoted entirely to the work of elementary school teachers. The purpose of this summer school is to arouse in each teacher a determination to grow and become always better teacher.

The instructors are as follows: Miss Margaret M. Colton of Providence, R. I., will have charge of the first four years work in arithmetic and English, including history and spelling.

Miss Catherine G. Foley of the Boston public schools will give courses in primary reading, covering the first four years' work.

Prof. Roy L. Smith of the North Adams, Mass., normal school has courses in the grammar grades in method in history, geography and nature study; and also a course on American ideals, which is for the purpose of stimulating patriotism and good teaching through an understanding of the present European conflict and our relation to it.

Miss Nella H, Cole of the North Adams rural training school will have charge of the work in rural school management, physical education, games, and folk dancing.

Miss Adelaide Patterson of the Rhode Island normal school gives courses in story telling, both for the lower and upper grades; and a course in articulation and clear and correct reading.

Miss Genevieve Andrews of the Plattsburg, N. Y., normal school will have charge of the drawing and construction

Miss Jessie I. Ross, principal of the training class at Essex Junction, will conduct the grammar grade work in English and arithmetic, with special attention to oral and written composition. Miss Anna McCormick of the Castle ton normal school will give instruction special stress on the Palmer method. Miss Hannah P. Waterman of Massa-

Notes for Week Ending May 11.

Corn Planting.

The warm weather and ideal soil condition make us think of getting the corn into the ground so that it will be growing. I wish at this time to call your at-tention to a few important matters that are closely related to the success of the corn crop. In the first place we have admitted that our main object in growing corn this year is to defeat the Hun Then let us waste no effort to make the crop the best that we can. This applies to the corn that we grow to feed the cows as well as that grown for the grain. The object is the same, that of produc-ing the most actual food value that we can on the acres that we have with the help that is available. The farm bureau demonstrated last year, conclusively, that certain types of corn would make more total food than others. Select the seed corn for silage from supplies that are grown in southern New England. These types are the right kind for our latitude. They will not only produce a high tonnage of fodder or silage per acre, but they will also prokind of seed to fill all the orders of members of the exchange and will have some surplus. This seed has been tested by mongrel bred birds are manifold. F. H. Abbott, County Agr. Agent. SELECTION OF BREEDS

For General Farm Use Plymouth Rocks, Rhode Island Reds and Wyandottes.

For general farm use and for the back yard flock the American or general pur-pose breeds would probably be the best, co-operation such as Plymouth Rocks, Rhode Island agriculture. Reds and Wyandottes. For the egg breeds, if one desires to specialize in that feature, the Leghorns, Anconas, Minorcas and Spanish are the most popular; genspeaking, their popularity ranges in the order named.

You will find there are good and poor laying strains in any of the above breeds. But with the present day science and efficiency methods you can make great improvement in any strain you may have, towards more eggs, more meat or for exhibition. So when it comes right down to which breed, it really makes no duce the nearly ripe grain that we need difference; use your preference, but be so much for the silo. The exchange has sure they are pure bred and then improve succeeded in obtaining enough of such that strain along the lines you want to
